Twelfth Annual National Debate Tournament
at West Point

APRIL 23-26, 1958

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY
WEST POINT, NEW YORK

FOREWORD

On behalf of the United States Corps of Cadets and the United States Military Academy, I am very happy to welcome the students and faculty members who will be our guests for the Twelfth Annual National Debate Tournament at West Point.

Leaders in forensic activities in all parts of the country have given generously of their valuable time in performing the necessary pre-Tournament tasks that enable us to bring together the outstanding debate teams which represent their regions here. During the next three days, team coaches and visiting speech professors will carry the responsible burden of judging the debates that are scheduled. To those individuals, and to the student debaters who have competed for an invitation, we express our gratitude for making this annual event possible.

I sincerely hope that your stay at West Point will be both profitable and pleasant. Just as valuable as the debating itself is the opportunity the Tournament affords for the exchange of ideas and information among the students and faculty of the thirty-six colleges and universities which are represented. I am confident that from such an exchange will emerge a greater understanding and appreciation of our mutual problems. Please return again to visit us at the Military Academy.

GARRISON H. DAVIDSON
Lieutenant General, USA
Superintendent

General Davidson awards the Larmon Trophy to the 1957 winning team of Norman Lefstein and Phillip Hubbard, representing Augustana College, Rock Island, Illinois.

The Larmon Trophy has been awarded annually since 1947 to the winning team in the National Debate Tournament at West Point. The Trophy is the generous gift of Mr. Sigurd S. Larmon of Young and Rubicam, Incorporated of New York City.

HISTORY

This Spring marks the twelfth successive year that college representatives from throughout the nation have journeyed to West Point to participate in the National Debate Tournament. Through eight seeding rounds and four elimination rounds these teams will vie for possession of the coveted Sigurd S. Larmon Trophy, emblematic of the national collegiate debating championship.

The idea of the Tournament at West Point seems to have evolved from two sources at about the same time and found its aegis in the renaissance of cadet extra-curricular activity which followed the war years of 1941 through 1945. During the Second World War the accelerated program left little time in the cadet's training for extra-curricular pursuits. But when the curriculum was again expanded to four years, Cadet Tom Schwinn took the reins of the recently re-established Debate Council and in the ensuing year arranged a small regional debate tournament. With the success of this intercollegiate meeting, the cadets were encouraged to think in terms of a larger, more comprehensive tournament -- perhaps national in scope. Simultaneously there was much discussion in other debate circles. It was generally agreed among intercollegiate debate coaches that there should be a national tournament. West Point seemed to be a logical and generally acceptable place at which to convene these annual meetings.

The ambition of the cadets and the interest of their collegiate associates probably would never have found form as a national tournament, however, had it not been for the aid and advice of such officers as General Maxwell D. Taylor, then Superintendent of the Military Academy; Colonel L. J. Legere, at that time a member of the Department of Social Sciences; and Colonel G. A. Lincoln, the present Professor and Head of the Department of Social Sciences at West Point. These men gave generously of their time in support of the project. They encouraged the few members of the early Debate Council and helped to pave the way for the first national tournament.

Administratively, little has changed in the Tournament's twelve-year evolution. The Academy does not propose to select the regional participants. The nation is divided into eight areas by a more or less mathematical scheme determined by debate population. The selection of the regional representatives becomes the responsibility of the member schools of each region. In every part of the country leaders in the forensic field give generously of their valuable time to perform the necessary pre-Tournament district tasks that enable them to bring outstanding debate teams together for this event.

This Spring thirty-six teams representing the nation's colleges and universities are again gathered at West Point to debate the national topic. Included in this year's program are lists which summarize the progress of the Tournament and reflect its growing stability and scope. From these lists it can be seen that this Tournament is truly national in scope, attracting teams representing a cross-section of the finest intercollegiate debating in the country.
