52nd
National Debate Tournament

University of Utah

March 27 - 30, 1998

March 5, 1998

On behalf of the Department of Communication at the University of Utah and the Utah Debate Squad, let me voice our great pleasure at seeing you on our campus for the 52nd National Debate Tournament! We are most pleased to share our gorgeous mountain vistas, outstanding campus facilities, and our eager willingness to please as your hosts of this year's NDT. If there is anything we can do to make your stay with us in Salt Lake City a more pleasant one, please do not hesitate to ask.

I am pleased to announce that the newly-appointed President of the University of Utah, J. Bernard Machen, will address you for a few brief words of welcome at the opening banquet Thursday evening. Once the tournament begins, you will be our guests at the Olpin Union building each morning for continental breakfast, as you gather for tournament announcements. The Center Ballroom will be the main tournament gathering place. The Saltair Room, just down the hall from the Center Ballroom, is equipped with individual computer work stations for those schools who reserved them, as well as work tables for the tournament as a whole. The Saltair Room is available beginning Friday morning and through Sunday evening.

Once again, welcome to our campus! We wish all of you good luck in what will surely be great debate competition, as is always the case at the NDT. Congratulations to all of you for simply qualifying for this prestigious event; it speaks highly of your talents and skills, as well as your future success.

Cordially,

Rebecca S. Bjork

The National Debate Tournament

THE YEARS AT WEST POINT

In 1947, it was unusual to find debate teams crossing the country or meeting a rival team more than once or twice. Most debate tournaments were local or regional in nature. There was no place where top teams from across the country could compete. The West Point National Intercollegiate Tournament was organized and conducted by the United States Military Academy to provide such an experience--where top teams from across the nation could meet. The tournament rules were determined by West Point Administration in consultation with such debate coaches as A. Craig Baird of the University of Iowa, G.M. Musgrave of Des Moines, Alan Nichols of USC, E.R. Nichols of the University of Redlands, and Joseph O'Brien of Pennsylvania State University.

Seven regions were set up to identify top teams, and select 29 colleges to participate in five seeding rounds and four elims over a three day period. Some of the features of the tournament stipulated that no school would meet a school within 500 miles of itself during the seeding rounds and that no coach would judge a school from his or her own district. Several traditions started at West Point remain in practice today: the "big board," oral announcement of pairings, and team signs in the rooms.

West Point administered the tournament for the first twenty years of its history. Initially there were no fees; housing and meals were provided by the Academy. For the first few years coaches stayed in the homes of Academy officers. All entertainment facilities on the base were free, except for the Post Theatre, which charged 15¢ a movie (Debaters Magazine, 1947). During these years the tournament was expanded from 29 to 38 teams. After a series of tab room errors, a Committee of coaches was set up to "review" the results of the prelims before elim rounds began (Parson, "The NDT at Fifty").

THE AMERICAN FORENSIC ASSOCIATION TAKES OVER

The Early Years: 1967-1974

In 1966 West Point Commandant William Westmoreland informed George Ziegelmuller, then President of the American Forensic Association, that the Academy would no longer host the tournament. The reason cited was "budget constraints," and the decision came as a complete surprise to the forensic community. Four coaches, Annabel Hagood of Alabama, Herb James of Dartmouth, William Reynolds of Georgetown and Ziegelmuller of Wayne State formed an interim transition committee, with Hagood and James focusing on the problem of finance.

The early years of the AFA sponsored tournament (1967-1975) were marked by coaches planning, setting guidelines and eligibility rules, searching for a director as well as a tournament site; they were years of change. The first chair of what became the National Debate Tournament Committee was Annabel Hagood, and the first NDT Director, Stan Rives. The initial committee assumption was that it would pick a different director for each year. Following Rives as director were Richard Rieke in 1968 at Brooklyn College, Roger Hufford in 1969 at Northern Illinois, Dave Matheny in 1970 at the University of Houston, and John Lehman in 1971 at Macalester College and again in 1972 at the University of Utah. This period was marked by the development of coaches' responsibility for all aspects of the tournament, which was renamed The National Debate Tournament. Beginning in 1970, it was possible for a school to have two of its teams qualify to the NDT; this occurred after much heated debate (and a fear that some school would "close-out" the NDT which apparently would constitute an embarrassment).

Districts were reconstituted but remained eight in number until a new district (District IX) representing the Rocky Mountain States was added, and an initial allotment of bids for each district was negotiated. The NDT Committee sought a way to recognize teams achieving outstanding records throughout the season, and the first-round at-large bids were invented to begin operation in 1971. Initially the Committee proposed a list of 10 major tournaments during the year, the winner of which would get an automatic bid to the NDT; since a team might win more than one tournament, the second place would earn a bid if the winner had already received one. With some modification, this system worked for two years (although there were disagreements over which constituted the top ten tournaments for a particular year), but by 1973 the Committee had changed to the current system--having 16 bids awarded on the basis of a team's full season record.

The early 1970s also saw a shift in tournament format. Occasionally a negative team would want to know something about an affirmative plan in the hope of linking a particular disadvantage. The practice was for the first negative to outline a series of questions to be answered in the second affirmative. During the early 1970s there was some movement to adopt a format which allowed direct questioning of each speaker, and the cross-exam format was adopted for the 1976 NDT; while some invitational tournaments initially kept the old format, it was not long before cross examination debate became dominant.

The Later Years: 1975-1997

Merwyn Hayes of Wake Forest directed the NDT in 1973 and 1974. After his surprise resignation in the fall of 1974, a member of his tab room staff, Mike Hazen of Wake Forest was chosen to direct the NDT, a post he held until 1983. The tournament remained the same size (62 teams; it had been increased from 46 teams in 1973), and used the same method of pairing (high-high power match in odd number rounds; high-low within brackets for even numbered rounds). It also placed the same number of teams into the elimination rounds: 16.

David Zarefsky of Northwestern replaced Hazen as director, and ran the tournament from 1984 until 1989. The size of the tournament moved from 62 teams to 74 teams by 1988 and the elimination rounds expanded to include all teams with five wins and thirteen ballots. This was also the decade of the first experiment with computer tabulation, and it occurred at the 1988 tournament (Zarefsky interview). Gary Larson had developed a computer program for pairing and judge placement, but it was backed up in the traditional manner. In 1989 the experiment was tried again, but the computer program crashed early, and the tournament was gently removed from machine control.

Several changes took place in the early 1990s when the tournament was directed by Al Johnson. The tournament size was determined by a complex set of formulas, with the number of teams ranging from 68 to 78, the maximum allowed. Six schools could now have a third team qualify to enter the tournament.

The tournament began experimenting again with computer programs, this time with one developed by Rich Edwards of Baylor University (Edwards, Tab-Room-on-the-Mac). The NDT Committee made changes in pairing assumptions, with the number of high-high power matched rounds reduced from three to one.

The 1996 Golden Anniversary NDT brought more than one hundred alums to Wake Forest University where the Anniversary tournament was held. Alumni listened to rounds (with mixed reactions), visited with Former Senator and Presidential Candidate George McGovern, with the current debaters and with each other. Bill Southworth and Allan Loudon prepared an elaborate tournament booklet, featuring a great deal of the 50 year happenings of the NDT.

From 1988 on, participation in elimination rounds was limited to teams which had collected 5 wins and 13 ballots, which meant that typically one to three teams with 5 wins and fewer ballots were denied the chance to participate. For 1997, the NDT Committee changed the rules so that all teams with 5 wins regardless of ballot count could advance to the elimination rounds (up to a total of 32). Ironically, the 1997 NDT had the same number of elimination round teams as the 1996 tournament. This was also the first year that the NDT Committee experimented with E-Mail for first and second round at-large submissions, with mixed results.

The 52nd NDT used the Rich Edwards' computer program on two computers, with one computer checking the other one. The topic debated was, "RESOLVED: That the United States should substantially increase its security assistance to one or more of the following Southeast Asian nations: Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar (Burma), Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, Vietnam." Cases on the topic dealt with a large spectrum of problems facing Southeast Asia, ranging from political tensions with the People's Republic of China to the health risks created by the presence of landmines and unexploded bombs in specified countries. Negative teams made heavy use of arguments which centered around the philosophical assumptions behind U.S. action, the domestic political implications of increasing assistance, and the geopolitical interests of other major actors in the region.

In the final round of the 1998 NDT, Northwestern University advocated U.S. assistance to speed up the removal of unexploded bombs in Laos. This case was quite popular and successful this year. Emory University countered with a critique of liberal humanism built around the work of authors such as Martin Heidegger. In an excellent and interesting debate, the affirmative prevailed.

University of Utah photographer Chad Greenleaf provided many of the pictures in this edition, especially team photographs and speaker awards. I am indebted to Paul Slaphey of the University of Iowa for many of the "action" pictures included, and for the pictures of semi finalist and finalist teams. I would also like to thank Josh Zive and Keri Bodensteiner of the University of Kansas for their help in picture identification, description of the topic, and in the preparation and design of this book.

1998 TOP SPEAKERS

The First Place Speaker Awards went to Michael Gottlieb of Northwestern University, being presented here by Board of Trustees Chair John Gossett. These awards include the Wayne Brockriede First Place Watch, donated by Robert Feldhake (1976 Top Speaker) and the Travelling Tiffany Bowl naming the NDT's Top Speakers.

Second Speaker at the 1997 NDT, also receiving a watch, was George Kouros of Emory University. Kouros was also part of the Top First Round At-Large team.

Third Speaker was Lesley Wexler of the University of Michigan.. Fourth Speaker was Corey Rayburn of the University of Iowa, who was also the 1997 NDT top speaker. Fifth Speaker was Michigan's Corey Stoughton. The Michigan team of Stoughton and Wexler was 8-0 and top seeded after the preliminary rounds.

The 1998 Final Round

Winning debaters from Northwestern University Ryan Sparacino (Fairfax, VA) & Michael Gottlieb (Lawrence, KS) are pictured with coach Scott Deatherage and the NDT Championship Sigrid Larmon Trophy as winner of the 52nd National Debate Tournament. They also received the Permanent First Place Trophy and finalist watches.

The final round of the 1998 NDT took place between Northwestern University (Michael Gottlieb & Ryan Sparacino) and Emory University (George Kouros & Anjan Sahni). Emory moved into the final round with a 3-2 decision over Michigan State University (Erik Cornelier & John Sullivan) in the semis; Northwestern earned their position with a 5-0 decision over the University of Michigan (Lesley Wexler & Corey Stoughton) in the semi-final round. In the finals, Northwestern was affirmative and Emory negative. Five judges were chosen to observe the fray: Rod Phares of the University of Kansas, Dee Dee Giroux of Harvard University, Bill Trapani of the University of Iowa, Ryan Galloway of Baylor University, and Will Repko of Michigan State University. The decision of the judges was unanimous -- 5-0 for the affirmative team from Northwestern.

The Second Place team of George Kouros (Skokie, IL) and Anjan Sahni (Atlanta, GA) of Emory University are holding the Walker Permanent trophy for the runner-up NDT team. They also received individual finalist watches and a permanent Second Place trophy.

1998 First Round At Large Team

The Emory University team of Anjan Sahni and George Kouros display the Rex Copeland Memorial Trophy for the top team in the first round at-large balloting. The award, named for the Samford University debater who was killed in 1990, was donated by his parents.

New Awards

A Championship Coaching Award was instituted in 1995, called the Ovid R. Davis/West Georgia College Award. The 1998 recipient of the watch was Northwestern's coach, Scott Deatherage.

The Board of Trustees announced formation of the Lucy Keele Award in 1996. It was to honor her more than 20 years on the Board and Committee. The Board presented a joint award to Emory University's Bill Newnam and Melissa Wade for their work in inner-city debate.

Rex Copeland Award,

1990 - 1997

On September 21, 1989, the life of Rex Copeland was brought to a sudden and tragic close. With his death, Samford University lost an outstanding student, and the forensic community lost an excellent debater and friend.

In recognition of Rex's professional and personal qualities, Samford University together with his parents endowed a permanent award in his name. The Rex Copeland Memorial Award is presented annually to the collegiate debate team ranked "Number One" in the First Round, At-Large team selections.

This award recognizes the few who achieve one of the highest honors in the debate community.
