

“The Challenges of Radical Islam”

Radical Islamic movements present well-known security challenges for the West and for governments in Muslim societies. Perhaps less known are the challenges that radical Islamic movements themselves face, including competition from other, more popular Islamic movements. A generation after radical Islamic leaders declared armed revolution to be an "individual duty" for every Muslim, why don't we see more violence in the name of Islam?

Wednesday, April 16

5:00 pm

DeTamble Auditorium, Tribble Hall

A Public Lecture by

Dr. Charles Kurzman

Associate Professor of Sociology
UNC-Chapel Hill

Author of The Unthinkable Revolution in Iran and the forthcoming work, Democracy Denied, 1905-1915; editor of Modernist Islam and Liberal Islam; and co-editor of An Islamic Reformation?

*Sponsored by the Departments of Political Science, History, Religion, and Sociology
& the Middle East and South Asian Studies minor.*

For additional information, contact Dr. Michaelle Browers at browerm@wfu.edu